FLORENCE, - MAY 28, 1888

NEW YORK'S POLISH JEWS.

People Whose Rules of Life Resemble Those of Bible Times.

On Sunday is the best time to see this colony, because then it offers the strangest and strongest contrast with the life that surrounds it. East Broadway is the main thoroughfare in this colony.

The ones grand avenue of the rich Quakers of forty years ago—the street that led to the houses of the proprietors of Ivory Brough and Barry Wall and the now aristocratic Roosevelt.

The solid big houses are there yet, with their high stoops and broad fronts and mansion-like appearance, but how changed, how sadly changed.

Pillows and carpets hang from their upper windows, what were once the dining rooms and parlors are packed thick with workmen and workwomen making clothing, and the windows and walls are lined with bales of the cheapest coats and trousers imaginable.

Queer, blousy women in greasy wigs and very odd-looking men in long beards are running higher and thither. The roadway and gutters are full of refuse and waste, the air is heavy with bad odors, the breath of squalor, neglect, and indifference to appearance and comfort.

Very strange signs are over the doors. The characters are Hebrew. The only words we can read are the proper names, nearly all ending in the "letters" "sky" or "ski." Sunday to these folks, as to all but the liberal Hebrews, is as Monday is to us. There is only one way in which they observe our Sabbath. This is by closing their theaters. They do this because our laws forbid their being opened.

By mounting any one of a dozen flights of steps we can step from New York to modern Asia Minor, almost to ancient Judea. It is in the synagogues that this change confronts us. They are bare, forlorn places—mere rooms full of benches—but they are highly important to this strange community.

Here the rabbis reside, and the rabbis, as he used to be, the chief source of authority and wisdom. He preaches all here on Saturdays, teaches school all the week, holds court perpetually as a judge before whom all discussions and disputes are brought, marries, christens, confirms, blesses, advises, exerts, chastises, and, in a word, guides and controls his flock. Like nearly all the men here wears a velvet cap, and like all he refrains from shaving his beard. His language is sometimes Hebrew, but in most cases he uses the tongue of his people, a singular mixture of Hebrew, a Polish, or Hebrew and the tongue of whatever other Slav race he belongs to. All about the neighborhood are bookstores, and the books are all printed in one polyglot or another corresponding with the talk of the people.

The young girls are more or less fair and pleasing to the eye. The majority are smart, but some are very fair blondes with golden tresses. All the married women look alike, however. For all have shaved their heads and wear wigs—of black hair, preceding in their looks from little stems of cord or horsehair. It is said that this mechanism of the wig does not show when they are new, but I never saw one that did not show its secrets any more than I ever saw a Chinaman's queue that was not lengthened with black thread or horsehair. These married women are made to look less attractive by their fashion of wearing their waistbands almost under their armpits. The strongest predilection is of red dresses, and their next strongest is for wearing them for lengths of time exceeding human belief. Their wigs serve to hide other head coverings so that one is next to never seen in a hat or bonnet, no matter where or how far she goes. Even on railroad journeys they go bare headed. They are not allowed to cover while in church, where they sit apart from the men, and I have heard that among the strictest of the orthodox the women may not cover in the presence of their husbands. However, a perusal of Deuteronomy and Leviticus (which I beg leave to state are books in the Bible) will show exactly what the strictest rules of the race were, and in the main, remain to-day.—Cor. Providence Journal.

How They Marry in India.

At Trichur, in the East Indies, a town inhabited chiefly by Nairs, the landholding class of the coast, divorce seems to be as simple as marriage is easy. The Nair lady is a very independent person. Some one offers a cloth; that is the proposal. If she accepts it, that is the marriage. If she is tired of her husband, she gets rid of him and takes up with another, and is not held to have behaved disgracefully in so doing. To give a cloth as a present is a very common thing in India. By cloth is meant the garment worn by women in the East, and it may be very plain and cheap or very rich and costly. But here, whatever kind of cloth it be, to give one is very significant, as a distinguished visitor to Trichur found when he offered one to a Nair lady in whose house he had received some civility. Whatever opinion may be held from a moral point of view of these marriage relations, they result in many marriages and for the most part comely and very often beautiful females.—Fall Mail Gazette.
